Interdisciplinary Studies

BOREAL INSTITUTE FOR NORTHERN STUDIES

North is not a strictly geographical term for Canadians. The meanings we associate with the word may range from lines from Robert W. Service to a line from our national anthem. For the past twenty-five years the word north has had a particularly great currency in Canada, but it remains a poorly defined term. In response to the lack of information and the unavailability of existing information, the Boreal Institute for Northern Studies was formed in 1960.

The Institute is a natural outcome of the University's location and its tradition of interest in the North, and its stated purpose is the "acquisition and dissemination of knowledge about the North." Research activities, the library, a publication program, and a public education policy are some of the ways the Boreal Institute is attempting to increase all Canadians' understanding of a major portion of Canada. They characterize their approach as "multidisciplinary" and it involves the interaction of social sciences, biological sciences, earth sciences, and engineering.

The research activities of the Institute cover a wide area. The program of Grants-in-aid of Northern Research provides funds or "seed money" to initiate projects rather than support long term studies. Granting priority is given to applied research problems and a multidisciplinary approach. These priorities are intended to encourage the training of young scientists in northern research and also reflect the Institute's conviction that the multidisciplinary approach is appropriate to the North.

This year the Institute received a grant from the provincial government of one hundred and sixty thousand dollars per year to be awarded for the next three years. This money is intended to fund longer-term studies, and while the granting priorities will remain substantially the same as those for the grants-in-aid program, the funds will be available to more established scholars and researchers.

The Institute is also involved in contract research. One of the funded programs currently underway is a training program in community and municipal affairs for people engaged in local government in the Northwest

The restoration of Pembina Hall has received a Regional Prize Award for 1977 from from Heritage Canada, the national organization for promoting the conservation of historic structures. The Award was announced at the annual meeting of Heritage Canada in Ottawa on 30 September. It includes a cash prize of $2,000. Accepting the Award on behalf of the University was Margaret Andrekson, member of both the Board of Governors and the Senate. Pembina Hall, the third oldest building on Campus was completely renovated by the autumn of 1975.

The project competed against conservation projects within Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia, and the Northwest Territories. This year, two regional prizes were given by Heritage Canada; the second was given to the architects of Van Rhone and Iredale for restoration work on Hodson Manor erected in Vancouver in 1893.

Territories. The program was initiated in response to the transition of administration from government agencies to the northern communities themselves, and the quality of the program and its evaluation will be controlled by the Institute.

The coordination and dissemination of knowledge about the North is another aspect of the Institute's function, and one that is highly important because of the intensification of interest in the North over the past years. Because southern Canada's relationship to northern Canada has suddenly become far immediate than in the past, an ability to deal with a vast amount of new information about the North is essential. The Boreal Library is the major tool in the Institute's coordination of information about the North. As well as a substantial collection of books pertaining to all aspects of the North, the Library maintains such resources as the Northern Titles KWIC Index, a current listing of government publications, periodicals, and newspaper clippings. They also maintain a file of newspaper clippings covering all aspects of the North and can make available other indexes such as The Library Catalogue of the Scott Polar Research Institute in Cambridge, England. In keeping with the Institute's interdisciplinary approach, the Library's collection policy covers any information relating to the Canadian North and northern regions around the world, and in cases where there is relevance, south polar information is also collected.

The Library actively participates in a number of conferences about the North, and from its inception has been active in the Northern Library Colloquy, a semi-informal meeting of librarians, information specialists, bibliographers, and editors of journals about the North.

The Institute has a number of publications. The Contributions Series is composed of reprints of articles that have resulted from research that has been funded by the Institute and from research by the Institute members. There have also been thirteen Occasional Publications and five miscellaneous publications. Both the Library and the publication program aid in the dissemination of information about the North. The Institute's services are valuable and used extensively by people who are going to the North to live, work, or pursue particular research problems.

As a continuation of the Institute's policy of making information available to the public, an Arctic Summer School has been developed. Together with the Faculty of Extension and an advisory committee from government and industry, the Institute developed a program which educates management and professional people who wish to know more about the environmental conditions and native peoples of northern Canada. Students and staff work together examining both the specialized subject matter and the interdependence of the various disciplines. The school is held in the North and each year there are approximately seventy participants. This year a similar program is being developed for the Yukon.

Throughout the course of the year numerous papers are presented by Institute members at various professional meetings. In turn, six meetings are held each year and outside speakers address the Institute. The meetings are held under the auspices of the Boreal Circle. Students, members of the academic staff, and individuals from the community at large are invited to attend.

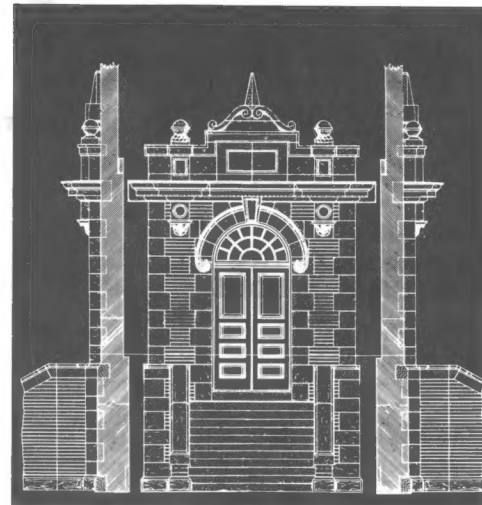

Northern Canada has always played a part in Canadians' sense of identity. Through the years it has always been given vague and promising labels such as the frontier of the future. Today in Canada we are experiencing the actualization of all the vague statements made about the North, and the need for precise and well articulated information is plain. The Boreal Institute's policy of open and unbiased examination should prove to be of increasing importance and interest to all those concerned with Northern issues.

GENERAL FACULTIES COUNCIL

The regular meeting of General Faculties Council was held on Monday, 27 September. The following matters were discussed.

New members of Council

GFC welcomed the following new members: I.G. Dalla Lana, Chemical Engineering;

Athabasca Hall, the University's oldest building, will be officially reopened on Saturday, 8 October, at 2 p.m. in the building's entrance foyer. Everyone in the University community is invited to the reopening ceremonies and to Athabasca: Exhibitions from the University Collections, a major exhibition in Athabasca Hall, the Students' Union Art Gallery, and the University Art Gallery and Museum representing the vast array of art, artifacts, and natural objects the University has acquired through its history. The exhibition, celebrating Athabasca Hall's reopening, will continue until 4 November (11 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Fridays; 11 a.m. until 9 p.m. Thursdays; and 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. weekends and holidays).

Nominating Committee Report and Elections

Election of Academic Staff the the Board of Governors

Council approved revised procedures for the election of an academic staff member to the Board of Governors. Under the revised procedures, the Secretary of GFC requests nominations from each dean, who is required to notify all full-time teaching staff in his faculty that such nominations are being sought. In addition to nominees submitted from the faculties, there is provision for the nomination of any member of academic staff whose name is listed with the Secretary of GFC by the stated deadline and whose nomination is supported by at least five other full-time academic staff.

Regarding electoral methods, Council agreed to a motion that "If there are more than twelve nominees, a preliminary election should be held with the top six candidates standing for election and a final preferential (transferable) ballot used. Should there be between six and twelve nominees the executive of GFC might authorize a direct preferential (transferable) ballot be used without the necessity of having two elections."

Council then voted that similar procedures be used when electing members of the full-time faculty to Search and Review Committees for President and Vice-Presidents.

Campus Law Review Committee report

The revised report of the Campus Law Review Committee was presented, with an addendum making special provision for academic offenses. Council had heard the Committee's original report in April 1976, when members expressed concern about disciplinary panels being set to hear cases involving academic offenses.

Under the revised procedures, "any person believing that a student is guilty of academic dishonesty as defined by Section 5(1) of the Code of Student Behavior may initiate proceedings against that student" with the student's instructor or supervisor. The instructor or supervisor may then reprimand the student, impose additional work, discount certain work for the purpose of course or program credit, or reduce the grade to a lower pass level, a conditional pass level, or a failure level. He may also recommend more severe sanctions, such as suspension or expulsion from an honors program, from a faculty, or from the University. Recommendation of a severe sanction will automatically be reviewed by the dean, but imposition of a lesser sanction is to be reviewed only if a review is requested by the student. In both cases, particulars of the alleged crime and the sanction recommended must be filed with the faculty.

A student accused of an offense may appeal the accusation and/or the severity of the sanction imposed first to the faculty and, if he remains dissatisfied, with the University Appeal Board. No provision has been made for instructors, supervisors, or faculties to appeal decisions either at the faculty or appeal board levels.

Several members of Council felt that the language of the entire report was difficult to understand, and the report was adopted with the proviso that a simplified version be prepared clearly indicating the procedures to be followed in general. The Dean of Students, Burton Smith, pointed out the problems raised by the omission of clear definitions of such terms as "fraud" and "plagiarism."

Request from Canadian Union College for Extension of Course Offerings

Council approved the recommendation of its Committee on Admissions and Transfer that "the proposal from Canadian Union College for a general extension of their course offerings into the second year not be approved at this time."

Council also endorsed the Committee's recommendation that "the University not object in principle to second year offerings at Canadian Union College, but rather encourage Canadian Union College to upgrade its facilities to a level which is both adequate and acceptable."

The College will be permitted to bring in courses individually and in groups as it show its adequacy to teach them. These senior courses can be assessed and approved individually by the Committee on Admissions and Transfer as additions to the present affiliation agreement with the College.

Night Watch Patrols

Last March and April, student walking patrols, called Night Watch, were instituted by the Safe Campus Committee on a trial basis. At that time Campus Security was understaffed and made its patrols mainly in vehicles.

The intention of the Night Watch patrols was to discourage attempts at sexual assault and harassment of individuals walking alone on campus at night and to escort such people safely to their cars or buses; in fact the patrols also discouraged theft, vandalism, and other types of crimes.

Council commended the Committee for the Night Watch experiment, endorsed the principle of walking patrols, and recommended that the operation of walking patrols on campus be the responsibility of Campus Security.

At the GFC Executive meeting on 12 September W.F.G. Perry, Director of the Campus Security Force, indicated his support of walking patrols and suggested that Campus Security would expand the use of such patrols to the extent that its budget would permit.

Committee on Writing Competence

The GFC Writing Skills Committee, established on the recommendation of the ad hoc Committee to Investigate Writing Skills last fall, requested that its name be changed to the Committee on Writing Competence. Council endorsed this change.

The Committee also requested that it be expanded to permit representation from faculties other than Arts and Education.

Originally the Nominating Committee had proposed that the Committee on Writing Competence be composed of "four members of the academic staff representing the arts, education, extension, and the sciences"; Council modified this composition to read simply "four members of the academic staff." Although the nominees represented eight different disciplines, those elected represented only English and Education.

Council agreed to add to the Committee two members from faculties other than Arts and Education.

CHINA SINCE THE DEATH OF MAO

Mr. David Bonavia, China Editor of the Far Eastern Economic Review, Hong Kong, will deliver a free public lecture on the topic "China since the death of Mao" at 8 p.m. on Thursday, 6 October, in TLB-1, Henry Marshall Tory Building. SOUTH WEST AFRICA PEOPLE'S ORGANIZATION (SWAPO)

On Thursday, 6 October at 7:30 p.m. in the Union Centre, 10319 106 Avenue, and Friday, 7 October in the Students' Union Building Theatre at noon, two representatives of the South West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO) will give talks on the Republic of South Africa's occupation of Namibia (South West Africa) and on Canadian involvement in that region.

The representatives of SWAPO, Ms. P. Hashoongo, member of the SWAPO Women's Council, and Mr. H. Hamutenya, member of the SWAPO Executive Committee, are currently conducting a nation-wide tour of Canada under the sponsorship of the Canadian University Service Overseas (CUSO). In their talks some emphasis will be placed on the business operations of the Hudson's Bay Company, Falconbridge Mines, and Cominco (the mining subsidiary of Canadian Pacific Investments) in South West Africa.

In particular, attention will be drawn to the disparity in living standards between the non-white and white inhabitants of the area and the problems raised by the discriminatory social policy of "Apartheid."

The talks of the SWAPO representatives in Alberta are coordinated by the Free Southern Africa Committee, the Alberta Committee of CUSO, and the Fourth World Support Group. For further information concerning these talks, please contact K. Luckhardt at 432-5914 or 433-4129.
